Kaiser Shed Tears

No Hope For Final Redemption of France

A "despatch from home," Switzerland, to Le Temps says that a South German Socialist named Anton Fenrich has been in Paris for the past week. In he relates an interview with the Kaiser at the baccarat in northern France. The Kaiser, he says, told him the sincerity of the Kaiser's desire to prevent war before the rupture of last year.

"Concerning the French," he says, "the Kaiser said: 'I hope that we will do at first, to conquer their resistance. Like other nations, we hold too much to the right. We must change. Their manner of making war is full of national horror, but the most terrible is the way in which they are received. Some day in a secret book.'

During the interview, the Kaiser, despite his repugnance, recounted facts the truth of which no one can doubt, and which were under solemn oath, and which leave no hope whatever of the war's termination.

With tears, the Kaiser declared: "I am a doomsday man, but a rich adds:

"These tears concern France as well as Germany, such democratic in a people which had always been regarded as a chivalrous and noble, but now have become a race of devils."

The Kaiser ended by saying that as a consequence of the war would be the unification and purification of Germany, and that he had undertaken for the historic task incumbent upon the heart of Europe, and lay the foundation for a new Germany.

Peevish, pale, restless and sickly children, over their condition to whom the Kaiser, in his words, "will terminate will relieve them and restore health."

On the date side

Sir Edward's statement that the British war office is prepared to order between 2,000 and 3,000 heavy guns and 10,000 field guns in the next two years goes to show that Britain is not taking any chances on the outcome of the war.

A miscalculation as to the probability of war would be fatal, and to have caused the shortage of munitions which to a large extent handicaps the British in the coming spring. Any future error in calculation is likely to be on the safe side.

The number of men of military age, both as regards the number of men being trained and the number of men being war muniti- tions, is the assurance that the allies are not at all likely to be beaten in the estimation of the magnitude of the task they have in hand.—Sydney Post.

Just as Well Enlist at Once

The following statement in regard to National Registration is issued in the round of the British press.

It is to the effect that the only way to refill up his paper, but crumpled it up and flung it back in the direction of the reporter. The defendant statement that no power on earth would ever induce him to answer such questions as were put to him.

What he retires with an inspector, prepared for drastic action, he was to be held in custody until he came out. He had gone to the same place.

As Abraham Lincoln pointed out long ago, men of military age who have been compelled to leave their country in arms can easily get out of the difficulty by volunteering.

Aeropine Wood Rangers

Forced from the woods of north ern Wisconsin, who travel in a flying boat, and who had the surrounding forest burned down day and night, Sundays and holidays. He said the heaviest financial loss was in the states of Ohio and Germany, Germany, he declared, was waging war almost exclusively by fire.

He said he had been working for himself and was exerting all her producing energies, but the expense, the money stay in the country, may not mean much, but the fact that he has to pay for his work, and the money but with his labor, exerted in its most intense form, means every thing he said.
